POLLUTION FIGHT

MP Hopes To Mobilize The Nation

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA-This is a story about one MP and his battle against water pollution.

It is also the story of a backbencher who says he is having fun being an MP and who thinksunlike many of his colleagues who complain about being powerless and ineffective—that he can use his office and energy to generate socially useful activity.

The MP is David Anderson, 32-year-old former foreign service officer who was elected last year as Liberal member for Esquimalt-Saanich and who was described recently as one of Ottawa's most eligible

Anderson first became in volved in the problem of water pollution when his mother bought a washing machine which uses a detergent imported from the United States.

Major Canadian manufacturers of washing compounds subscribe to a voluntary code requiring detergents to be biodegradable — that is, that their foaming action will end after about 48 hours and will not continue to clog water-

But there was nothing on the U.S. import to guarantee that it met this standard, and there are apparently some foreign products entering Canada, and some domestic manufacturers, that are not subject to the code.

So last July Anderson introduced a private member's bill providing stiff fines for any-

He Just Wants Percentages

The detergent industry has published contradicting evidence and has argued that there is as yet no substitute for phosphates, it claims that eliminating phosphates from detergents in Canada would not have much impact on pollution.

Anderson is not so far seriously campaigning to ban phosphates. He is saying simply that manufacturers should print on boxes of detergents the percentage of phosphates.

This would enable housewives to choose a low-phosphate product, if they wished, and thus to play her part in battling pollution.

"The practice of originating almost all documents in English and subsequently translating them into French should cease at once," the commission says.

In some scathing remarks in the Commons, Diefenbaker accused the Liberal government of shamelessly debasing the monarchy.

Outside the Commons, Diefenbaker said the decision to remove the Queen's face from some banknotes was part of a "day-to-day process by this government to undermine the monarchy in

Finance Minister Edgar Benson, also speaking to reporters, said it has been his decision to change

Bill Intended as Eye-Catcher

Again, it has no chance of passing into law - few private member's bills are even debated - and was intended more or less as an eye-catcher to lure the industry into a debate.

Anderson was, in fact, scheduled to confront one of the industry leaders on TV last week as a result of the bill, but the leader had to cancel at the last moment. Meantime, Anderson went home to Victoria recently and called a meeting of the local groups concerned with pollution and consumer rights

With their encouragement he has now written to 150 organizations in the city youth groups, service clubs, women's patriotic societies, schools, businessmen, - in viting them to a meeting on Jan. 7 to discuss the problem of phosphates.

'Who knows which deter gents are low in phosphates?" he asks in the letter.

Anderson hopes that the Jan. 7 meeting will produce perhaps 1.000 volunteers to picket supermarkets, wear armbands or somehow get the message to manufacture that consumers want to know what is in the detergent

He has an even more dramatic idea in the back of his mind for the time when it may be necessary to bring public pressure on an oil dians to publicly burn their credit cards.

Anderson, in fact, is experimenting in participatory democracy, seeking to involve the people directly in the solution of public problems, using his backbench seat in the Commons as a base from which to organize activities outside Parliament.

BRITAIN OUTLAWS DEATH PENALTY

LONDON (AP) - The House of Lords today permanently banished the death penalty for murder in Britain after a two-day debate that crossed party lines.

The Lords approved without a formal vote count a Labor government bill to make permanent a four-year experimental ban on hangings despite strong Conservative opposition and public-opinion polls showing renewed support for using the gallows.

The receiving stations for the news about changes in the weather are not only the local radio stations. Your skin and your nervous system, with the assistance of your eyes and nose, all get the message from nature and instantly trigger the news to the action stations on guard in your body.

The action stations then go to work to maintain the internal system that regulates your body's temperature and production of heat and the amount of fluid it needs. They tell your body how much to sweat and when to cool off. The air conditioning only helps.

tween the federal and provincial approaches to the current question of test drilling for oil in the Gulf of Georgia is very clear. Federal Fisheries Minister Davis is concerned with saving a valuable resource - fisheries - and protecting one of the finest recreational and residential archipelagos in the world from the hazard of pollution. The Social Credit government of this province, on the other hand, appears in typical fashion to be concerned only with a possible opportunity to make some ready cash, and is quite willing to create the grave risks to our environment which this might entail.

The controversy is involved in the larger argument as to whether the provincial or the national government should have jurisdiction over the mineral resources of the Pacific continental shelf. Provincial Mines Minister Richter says that to the best of his knowledge and understanding the province controls "that part of British Columbia that is within the continental shelf". But the Supreme Court of Canada disagrees with him, having rendered a decision two years ago that this is a federal matter.

A later Ottawa proposal that the province take over control of the Gulf area, leaving the rest of the shelf under national control, was rejected by the provincial government, which clung to its overall

Mr. Davis is at present making every effort to ensure that the Gulf waters and islands will be safeguarded from the fate of the Santa Barbara shore, where uncontrollable oil seepage caused widespread pollution damage. Three oil companies have conducted seismic exploration in the area, and the next step would be exploratory drilling if the earlier tests gave encourage-

Proponents of drilling can offer no guarantee that it will not present a threat, particularly in an area which is frequently disturbed by minor earthquake shocks. And in any case, if development proceeded, the piping, pumping and shipping activities would create a continuing risk of incalculable damage to marine life and the environment as a whole

"This should be prevented. It is not as though there were an oil shortage and any Gulf deposits were in crucial demand. There is no necessity here. Mr. Davis should be given every support by the public in keeping first things first, and preserving the invaluable assets of the Gulf Island area which far exceed in human and economic values the addition of a surplus oil enterprise.

FROM WINNIPEG

By JAMES H. GRAY

Too Close Association of Court and Cop

OLD PROBLEMS, unlike old soldiers, neither die nor fade away on the prairies. They just keep coming back to haunt governments which do nothing about them. One example is the problem of separating the police from the courts, which is back on the doorstep of the Manitoba Government. It arises because Winnipeg is once again wondering how to get out of the jail business

This is where the west came in 100 years ago when the Royal North West Mounted Police came riding out of the sunrise. Winnipeg is the only municipality in the Metro make-up which maintains its own jail. All the others use a holding jail run by the provincial government. So why, Winnipeg wonders periodically, should it bear the cost of running its own jail?

Bears Better Housed

The question has added point at this time because one of the members of the Royal Commission on Correction, Mrs. S. McArton, said that the Polar bears at Assiniboine park are better housed than the prisoners in the Winnipeg lock-up. Additionally she complained that the joint lacked privacy and mattresses, grouped several inmates in single windowless cages and was devoid of activities for those incarcerated

All this came as quite a shock to Winnipeggers who could be excused for assuming that their bright and newly constructed public safety building remedied the abuses and defects of the dilapidated Rupert Avenue jail.

In fact the new building perpetuates the fundamental flaw of prairie law enforcement of combining the police, the courts and the penal system within a single building. The magistrates courts, the magistrates offices, the police department itself and the city jail have been occupying common premises since the force was established. To reach a Winnipeg magistrate it is necessary to thread your way through the police department on foot or through the police switch-board on the telephone.

Shared Roof

But this is not only a Winnipeg problem. Precisely the same set of conditions apply in Calgary which also has a comparatively new building that houses police, magistrates and the jail.

The effect of this common housing is two-fold. It demonstrates to citizens who run afoul of the police that the magistrates courts are an integral part of the police system. The inclusion of the jail demonstrates to him that the concept that a prisoner is innocent until proven guilty is an illusion. He is treated by everybody as a convicted criminal from the time of his arrest until his acquittal or release on bail.

The end result is that the ideal of the bench standing between "our sovereign the queen and the prisoner at the bar" is tarnished beyond repair. As part of the police system, the bench becomes part of the pubic antagonism toward the police, and vice versa.

But in most western cities, this is how it has always been. In the earliest days, the senior Mounted Police officer in the frontier settlements conducted the trials of malefactors brought in by constables. Mostly they levied small fines, imposed suspended or short jail sentences. There was little room in their make-shift jails for incarceration of more than a handful of prisoners.

'Floater' System

This led to the universal adoption of the "floater" system of penance under which prisoners were given 24 hours to get out of town. It was natural that the system evolved under which the constables on duty would short circuit the court and run the unwanted out of town on their own hook

There was no point in resisting. If the citizen did not vamoose on orders from the constable, he would be jugged for 24 hours and get the same order from the magistrate, justice of the police or R.N.W.M.P. inspector.

With the current disquietude in Winnipeg this fact emerges quite clearly: The facade has changed, the jails are bigger, the court rooms are airier, but the system is still essentially the same. It is unlikely to change until the police are divorced from the jails and the courts, the magistrates evicted from the jail buildings, and the police and the magistrates are completely separated. The beginning of that process is not even in sight.

Britain's professional

With reference to an article in 'The Times' of December 4th concerning the low pay of professional workers in Britain, I would like to make the following observations.

In the first place, with regard to "junior doctors," I think if Miss Kennedy made inquiries with respect to the remuneration received by interns in Canadian hospitals she would not find that it is very much higher. Interns (or housemen, as they are called in Britain) are regarded as apprentices and paid as such, with board and lodging provided by the hospital (albeit deductible). The rate of pay is geared to the single man (or woman) in his middle twenties who has just finished his medical training and who must spend a year interning before he can be licenced to practice. The real malaise of the National Health Service in Great Britain and the reason why so many doctors emigrate would seem to me to be linked rather with the curious and unsatisfactory method of remuneration for general practitioners and the fact that their professional scope is so limited since the acute hospitals have their own staffs. The lot of the doctor who has acquired specialist qualifications is also not always a particularly happy one since he has to obtain hospital appointments and these are limited by hospital budgets,

The fate of other wage-earners in the so-called service or vocational professions is certainly hard by Canadian standards and they would definitely appear to be the under-dogs today. However, it would seem to me that the amount of satisfaction gained from his work by the average teacher, nurse or social worker more than compensates for the lower rate of pay vis a vis, say, the bus-driver. It must also be remembered that among the upper middle classes at any rate there is still a certain amount of private wealth circulating and not all professional people are financially dependent on what they earn. 'A SENSE OF THE TIMES' By C. L. SULZBERGER

Harry Truman Assesses the Presidency

WHEN, in his recently published memoirs, Dean Acheson referred to Harry Truman as "the captain with the mighty heart", he particularly honored the former President's strong leadership during a critical moment of American foreign policy-making. With this in mind, I wrote to Truman, who once had to take strong executive action in Korea, soliciting his comment on the impression that currently both the American public and American political opinion are seeking in a sense to hamper the President's full freedom to assert all the powers confided to him by the Constitution." On Dec. 1. Truman replied from Independence, Mo., to what called an "interesting and timely question," saying:

"The framers of the Contitution were clearly circumspect in being too definitive about the role of the President. In the critical and sensitive area of foreign policy, the President had the responsibility. In the matter of national security. was designated as Commander in "The provision for advice and consent, believe, is concerned with keeping the Congress fully informed on all decisions and commitments of the Chief Executive. Even under our carefully guarded system of power vested rather than imposed, as a practical matter, someone has to be in charge.

Maker of Decisions

"Someone has to make decisions and that someone is the President.'

This, plainly stated, was the case when North Korea's aggression forced an instantaneous reaction and is the crux of the argument over Vietnam between Congressmen and the White House, a debate in which certain legislators, above all Senators, have sought authority in foreign affairs exceeding that ascribed to them by Truman,

The latter's interpretation is precisely of the future. This, briefly, is the stated. The President must keep "the Congress fully informed in all decisions and commitments" but not, as it were, request permission or share executive

Truman, as is well known, used to stress this point with a homely adage in the White House: "The buck stops here." But he felt then and feels today that the President, while taking ultimate decisions, should explain them adequately and continually to the nation. Thus, he

"It goes without saying, that under our system the President must keep the people fully informed in all matters that touch on their lives, and he must schedule regular press conferences to give a continuing account of his stewardship - as well as to learn of what is troubling them by the questions put to him by the press.

Loss of Confidence

"A President who fails to communicate with the people forthrightly and courageously runs the risk of fostering a public detachment or, what could be even worse, a loss of public confidence." With respect to "public confidence,"

Truman avoids comment on present relationships between the White House and vociferous minority voices opposing Nixon's handling of Vietnam. Nevertheless, Truman makes this philosophical "Presidents, from the time of George Washington, have been subjected to attacks and abuse. It is a way that a free and open society keeps its Government institutions on the alert. It is a small price to pay for an aroused and active public opinion."

The question of how a President will respond to and deal with such "an aroused and actve public opinion" remains, of course, up to the incumbent Truman says:

"The Presidency in large measure depends on the occupant, his scope, his capacity to resist pressures from within and from without, and most importantly, a sense of the times, as well as a sense

American Presidency as I assess it and as I tried to live it and to administer

It is interesting to take this analysis of the world's most important executive office as a background against which to assess Nixon's Monday press conference. Certainly the President shared Truman's belief that he must "communicate with the people" to avoid risk of "a loss of public confidence. What nobody can yet judge is whether

Nixon's explanations of his decisions as Commander in Chief and steward of our foreign policy will help persuade the nation that he has "a sense of the times as well as a sense of the future." Only the future itself can tell. (C) 1969 The New York Times News Service

Rules Are First War Casualties

By ANDREW WILSON

"There must have been a dozen of the enemy still hiding in this position. The first pair wouldn't co-operate; so I shot one, and the other showed us where the rest were. When we had rounded them up, we shot them all. I couldn't spare the men to take them to a prisoner-of-war cage."

The officer who related this incident was not an American in Vietnam but a British lieutenant in the next bed to mine in a military hospital in Normandy during World War II. I recall it simply as my first intimation that even on the "right" side, the first casualties in war are the Grotius was obsessed with the dual problem of justifying and limiting military violence in the Thirty Years War. He developed the theory of the just war, which sanctioned self-defence and war to punish aggression, as well as the rules of war governing its conduct.

The theory of the just war enjoyed a short vogue before princes of the day reverted to the Machiavellian concept of war as a legitimate instrument of policy. It was not revived until the ideologi cal wars of our own time. But the rules of war, governing treatment of prisoners, pro-tection of non-combatants and similar matters, were widely respected for 200 years.
What sustained the rules

French Revolution, particularly when the idea of the "nation in arms" was joined Clausewitz's prescription for successful war: absolute violence pursued to its utmost ends.

In the half-century before World War I, European powers concluded no fewer than six treaties or conventions upholding humanitarian principles in warfare. But in the war-this did not prevent the bombardment of Belgian cities and unrestricted submarine warfare by the Ger-mans, or the starving of German civilians by the Allied

In World War II the total pursuit of the just war and the observance of rules for its conduct came sharply into conflict in the matter of strategic bombing.

When the accurate bombing military-industrial targets proved beyond the RAF's capability, the British war cabinet sanctioned "area bombing" of cities containing industrial plants. The killing of civilians was incidental and unavoidable.

But by 1944 the strategy changed. The accepted object

'Violence Pursued To Utmost

of bombing was to break the enemy's will to continue the war. The bombing of civilians was now an end in itself and culminated in 1945 in the destruction in one night of the undefended city of Dresden.

In the chaos of the time it was impossible to count the number who died in the city, which was crowded with refugees. Early German estimates put it at 35,000. Later independent investigation has suggested a figure of 135,000 twice as many as perished om the Hiroshima atom bomb

One could cite other occasions on which, in World War II, the rules of war incompatible with Allied war aims, to say nothing of their brutal disregard by the Axis. But the moral problems then raised seem almost insignificant empared with those raised by the two kinds of conflict hich preoccupy military planners today: counternsurgency and nuclear war.

A few months before the Pinkville "incident" being investigated by the U.S. army, I was in Vietnam on a pany of U.S. Marines. One night as we huddled beneath our bivouacs on a rainswept hilltop, conversation turned to an attack the unit had made on a Viet Cong-held village.

One of the Marines, a 19year-old conscript, remarked that he had killed five people up to date, but that one of them had turned out to be a 10-year-old girl and another a grandmother. Two of his companions, apprehending his worry in different ways, tried to console him.

One said something to the that accidents are bound to happen. The other, thinking that the conscript was uneasy about including them in his total score, commented that "they're all Cong under the skin.'

There is, of course, a considerable distance between the incidental killing of noncombatants in an attack on an enemy position and the murder of a village population in lust or revenge. Yet one could not fail to note in the almost casual tenor of this conversation the progressive brutalization which war can cause in the most ordinary

In Vietnam the process is hastened by the nature of operations. Every peasant is a potential enemy; troops are regularly ambushed: There is none of the rapport with the local people which marked. or example, the campaign by British forces in Borneo during the 1963-66 "confrontation" with Indonesia.

In an effort to overcome difficulty of pursuing the 'just" war with the totality of its firepower and yet observing the decencies inscribed in American field service regula tions, the American command resorted to the device of free-fire zones.

These are areas from which all non-combatants have supposedly withdrawn after being warned by leaflets dropped from the air or by instructions from the South Vietnamese administration.

But the concept underlying the free fire zone is quite false. Not only are Viet-namese villagers unwilling or afraid to leave their homes. the South Vietnamese authorities, on whom rests the burden of declaring the zone clear, are too often afraid to the extent of their ignorance. So the practice has led to some appalling incidents condoned by the authorities as "operational authorities 'operational accidents.

The blatant contradiction between American theory and practice has been ruthlessly exploited by the propaganda the Communists, whose own ideological struggle is uncomplicated by humanizarian scruples, and whose record of brutality is long, terrible, and unashamed

Were we concerned only with Vietnam, one could end here by endorsing the efforts of the Nixon administration to extricate America from what the former Bishop of Wool-wich once called, with military exactitude, its "moral

Their deep, overwhelming concern is to prevent the advances of technology from destroying the earth's natural systems. Towards this end they have begun to form action groups with odd new names like "Ecology Student Association" and "Students For Environmental Control".

The movement is spreading at a tremendous rate, from campus to campus across the nation. Originating in California - where students are involved in battles to save some of the world's most magnificent open spaces from the encroachment of power plants and automobiles now reaching the East Coast,

In Boston, Massachusetts, a student group known as Ecology Action, mockingly presented its "pollution award" to a local power company. At the University of Illinois, a body of conservation-conscious students went out in freezing weather to remove six tons of refuse from a nearby river. Michigan students have been organising the construction of small parks on waste land.

Professor Barry Commoner, Director of the Centre for the Biology of Natural Systems at Washington University, St. Louis, predicts that by next spring all these various protest groups will have come together as a major political student movement.

To date, America's

Public Urgency

"Already our political machinery is beginning to sense the public urgency and to respond. Conservation may soon become the leading domestic issue, thanks to the students.'

The student movement embraces every aspect of "the crisis for survival" population control, pollution, the encroachment of industry upon the countryside, the use of nuclear power, the congestion in the cities.

Although in most East Coast universities Vietnam is still the main focus of student protest, the "survival crisis" soon expected to overtake this - as it has already done on the West Coast - since it strikes closer home and could ultimately be more serious. (In California, a recent Gallup Poll showed that there is now even more public concern over the need to preserve the environment than there over Vietnam).

A number of major universities are planning "teach-ins" on environmental problems. And, giving a hint of the type of direct student action which can be expected, Washington lawyer Ralph Nader has become a crusader for consumers - last week led a group of law students in a demonstration outside the New York headquarters of General

Vital Links in the Chain

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL Director, Provincial Museum

Copepods, the "oar-footed" members of the great group of creatures called arthropods, form only one of many subclasses in the phylum but they are of utmost importance Almost every type of animal to many other members of the animal kingdom as well as to man. More fish and other aquation creatures feed on copepods than on any other kind of animal known and even some of the great whalebone whales—the world's largest animals-depend upon them for existence.

They are therefore vital links in the chain of food materials in the sea, performing the function of transform ing microscopic plant life into fats and proteins which can e utilized by animals larger than themselves, and eventually even by man. These copepods of the open water are small in size but what they lack in bulk they make up in numbers. Not only are they fantastically numerous but they multiply at an unbelievable rate, as many as nine billion being produced annually in 700 gallons of sea

As a group they are amazingly versatile. While a relatively large proportion of the many species live free in open water, both in the sea and in lakes, many dwell on the bottom or burrow in the mud or sand, some as deep as three miles below the surface of the ocean. Still others have taken up a parasitic existence and these have shown the greatest adaptability among all the crustaceans.

in the aquatic environment is parasitized by some kind of copepod. Starfish, clams, crabs, shrimps, barnacles, fishes and even whales—all are involved as hosts to some degree, and the variety of body forms assumed by the adult parasites is almost beyond belief.

The most bizarre species have undergone such profound changes that for a long time they were not recognized as copepods. Only a close study of their larval forms in recent years has revealed their true

The life history of a typical fish parasite will illustrate diversity in form and in developmental stages which, when combined, have made the study of these organisms both difficult and exciting. Usually the eggs hatch into tiny, free-swimming specks of life resembling those of many other crusta-

These little creatures grow while drifting with the current and pass through several stages of development until they look much like other copepods. At this stage, howthe advanced larvae attach themselves to the gills of a convenient fish, providing it is of the right species, and here males and females mate. After this the males apparently die, their usefulness having come to an end. The females, on the other hand, now leave the gills and settle on another fish, this time on the outside skin. Here each copepod proceeds to attach itself permanently by producing "horns" which penetrate the skin and enter the flesh of the fish.

Once established her body becomes elongated and she undergoes other changes which make her completely unrecognizable as a copepod. In fact she becomes nothing more than an egg-producing machine depending upon the host for nourishment and transportation, in the mean-time causing a tumerous growth to develop on the poor parasite is almost completely embedded in the flesh of the host; only the hind end projects in order to release eggs as they approach the hatching stage. While gills and outside skin surfaces are favorite places for attachment of copepod parasites they are not the only vulnerable spots. In fact copepods attack every con-ceivable parts of fishes:

When fully developed the

The spiracle or breathing passage of skates is the favorite point of attachment of one kind of copepod and the nostrils of some cods are home for a different species. Some of our flounders are attacked by a copepod which affixes itself only to the eyeball, which it penetrates and eventually causes blindness, while other fishes have copepods which burrow into body cavity and attack the heart, liver and other vital: One of the largest of the parasitic copepods measures several inches long and attacks a variety of fishes including swordfish, shark sucker, ocean sunfish and flying fish. In this creature the abdomen carries a series of branched feather-like processes which gives the cope-pod the name Pennella which means "little feathers."

A species of Pennella has even become specialized for attacking whales and as these are wide ranging animals examples of this copepod have been collected on numerous occasions in British Columbia when whaling was carried on Such whale parasites are truly giants of their kind measuring up to twelve inches in length, not counting egg sacs which usually hang from the tail. Part of the reason for their great length is that the forward portion of the parasite is elongated to penetrate the layer of blubber on the outside of the host's body.

Actually less than half the creature's body is exposed but this part is large enough to be parasitized itself by another organism, a barnacle which also favors whales as a hitching post.

Copepods therefore play an important role in the aquatic world; almost all other animals in the same environment either eat them in some form or are themselves eaten by them.

Pro-Peking American Seeks U.S. Entry / Woo

By STANLEY KARNOW

HONG KONG (WP) - Anna Louise Strong, the 84-year-old doyenne of the pro-Communist Americans residing in Red China, is reliably reported to be seeking to return to the United States.

Miss Strong, who has served as a propagandist for the Chinese Communist regime since she settled in Peking in 1958, is said to be concerned with her possible legal status in the United States should she return home.

In contrast to other American Communist sympathizers in China, several of whom have been jailed for political activities, Miss Strong apparently stands in good stead with the Peking government.

Her main motive in returning to the United States, it is believed, is to arrange for the publication of her auto-biography, on which she has been working for more than a year. The book was reportedly commissioned by a New York publisher.

Among other things, Miss Strong is reportedly trying to determine whether she would be permitted to go back to China, after a visit to the United States.

Under present state department regulations, only certain categories of Americans are authorized to travel to Communist China.

That Miss Strong is con-sidering a trip to the U.S. suggests to analysts here that the Chinese Communist regime would not block her departure from China.

Combined with other signs, this is considered to be an indication that the Communists are gradually abandonthe rigid policies that characterized their regime during Mao Tse-tung's comvulsive cultural revolution.

Despite her involvement in the cultural revolution, Miss Strong managed to escape the fate that befell other American Communists in China who took extremist positions in order to overcompensate for the fact that they were foreigners.

The most prominent of these Americans is Sydney Rittenberg, of Charleston, who was reportedly arrested in September, 1967. for "leftist opportunism after organizing a Red Guard faction composed of foreign Communists.

A U.S. Air Force veteran ho later worked for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration over to the Communists in the late 1940s out of indignation with Chinese Nationalist cor-

At the time of his arrest, he was employed by Radio Peking as an announcer on its English-language programs.

Dr. Spock Alters View On Obscenity

NEW YORK (Reuters) -Dr. Benjamin Spock, noted for his liberal views on child-rearing and political issues, calls for new obscenity laws to ban what he calls shocking movies, literature and art.

"For decades I was an uncompromising civil tarian and scorned the hypocrisy usually involved in the enforcement of obscenity laws," he says in an extract from a forthcoming book published Wednesday in the latest issue of Redbook maga-

"But recent trends in movies, literature and art shock obscenity and the courts' acceptance of it, have made me change my position other brutalizing trends."

Spock's new book is titled Decent and Indecent : Personal and Political Behavior.

He says

"In the climate of mid-20th century America, sophisticated citizens and the higher courts have rapidly pushed back the boundaries of what is considered obscene. Very little territory is left for 'hard core' pornography - and the boundary seems hard to determine.

. I would now join a majority, if such developed, in favor of new laws that would determine guilt simply on the sense of shock and revulsion.

"I'd want such laws to specify that they are not intended to discourage the presentation of themes involving immorality, lawlessness cruelty or perversion (all of which have regularly been dealt with in great literature and art), but only to curb a shocking manner of presenta-

Engst is married to Joan Hinton, a physicist who worked on atomic research in the U.S. and was later reported to be engaged in the Chinese nuclear development program.

Along with other foreign supporters of the Peking regime, these Americans were sometimes called "three hundred percenters" because of their excessive revolutionary zeal.

At one stage during the cultural revolution, several of them plastered up a wall poster complaining they were getting better treatment than Chinese comrades and demanding that they be re-garded as "class brothers" rather than "bourgeois ex-

According to Neale Hunter, an Australian teacher in China at the time, these Zealots were summoned to a meeting by Chinese Foreign Minister Chen Yi and told to "grow up."

When moderate military and civilian leaders came to the fore in late 1967, many foreign revolutionaries were arrested as the party line shifted.

In addition to being accused of "leftist opportunism", Rit-tenberg was labelled a "counter-revolutionary double-dealer" and charged with espionage

Anna Louise Strong evidently weathered this turmoil—partly because of her age, and partly because she has been less ideologically turbulent. As a veteran com-munist, she also seems to have sensed the dangers of becoming overly involved in factional disputes

A graduate of Oberlin College, class of 1905, Miss Strong worked with Seattle labor unions before the First World War, then moved to the Soviet Union, where she married a Russian communist and edited the English-Language "Moscow News.

Though she traveled to China frequently in the 1920s and 1930s, her plans to settle in Peking after the Chinese Communist takeover were delayed when she was arrested Stalin on charges espionage.

Forced to retire to Los Angeles after her expulsion from the Soviet Union, she complained later that life there was tedious because. among other chores, she had to do her own housekeeping.

In a letter to her Oberlin College classmates written in June, 1965, Miss Strong praised her existence in Peking because, she said, she had a cosy three-room apartment, servants and an auto80th birthday party that year. magazine in Shanghai.

Miss Strong signs a monthly 'Newsletter' that is remarkable for its lack of incompre-hensible communist jargon. Some sources say that the publication is ghost-written by Julian Schuman, a former U.S. navy officer who once her latest newsletter, Miss Strong disclosed that she had been ill but was now recovered and had attended the Chinese National Day ceremonies in Peking on Oct. 1. At the celebration, she said, she was given a place of

Alcoholism—A Serious Disease, Not a Social Aberration

Influential Americans Urge

National Alcoholism Policy

To Eliminate The Suffering

By COLMAN McCARTHY

WASHINGTON (WP) -When a person in the downtown area of any major American city falls to the street in a seizure brought on by a coronary attack or is the victim of an automobile accident or a fainting spell, he will likely be taken quickly to a hospital, put in a bed and be given moderate to excellent medical care until healthy or recovered. Society is conscientious in tending to its decently

But if a person happens to have the indecent disease of alcoholism and falls sick to the street, one of three the street, one of three probable fates awaits him, none of which includes a hospital bed: first, he lies there until he gets himself up and can move on. During the passed-out time, he will either be beaten, robbed, ignored or snickered at by passersby Second, if he is part of the skid row subculture that every city supports, he will either be brought to jail, to a last-rate drunk-tank or, in the case of only about four American cities, to a well-run detoxification centre.

Third, if he is a middle- or upper-class citizen, he will likely be taken by friends to home where the sick person may have jokes made about his "bender," or how "Good Old Billy really tied one on." Many see the public alcoholic as the most pathetic, the most hopelessly sick. Most were once healthy, happy and employed men, with wives and families. Now they are with broken, defeated men, almost completely forgotten by society. They are not happy drunk, the way Dean Martin cutely poses; nor glib-drunk, the way Norman Mailer gets; nor funny-drunk, like Jackie Gleason. Instead, they are puking, urinating, stinking, besotted drunk, classic tributes to what happens when America's most popular drug is abused.

Until a few years ago, a person diseased by overuse of the alcohol drug had only the Alcoholics Anonymous for hope of recovery, assuming he wanted recovery. The AA, which began in 1934 and has about 300,000 U.S. members, still has the best recovery record of any program. But taking nothing away from it, the AA's success may be

The American public is odd. 'Its fury can be whipped up a bout cyclamates, chicken meat in hotdogs, unsolicited credit cards, smut in the mails-none of which kills anyone. But an enormous and deadly disease like alcoholism, which annually wastes countless lives and billions of dollars, rarely raises a murmur.

It occurs among and by businessmen who "need a businessmen snort" at the cocktail lounge the clerk at the office parties, the housewife who nips secretly during the day, the priest in the lonely rectory, the military man frapped by the routine of army life. Ford Will Spend Millions in Fight On Air Pollution

DETROIT (AP) - Henry Ford II says his company has assigned 11,000 workers and allotted $31,000,000 to the problem of combating air pollution from automobile exhausts in

"I am publicly committing Ford Motor Co. to an intensified effort to minimize pollution from its products and plants in the shortest time possible," he said.

Ford said that in addition to the outlay on car exhaust emissions his company will spend $30,000,000 in 1970 on control of air pollution from its production plants.
"You must remember, though," he said, "that the automobile is only a small contributor to the environmental pollution and the federal government must get fully involved in this fight.

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T, (CP) - A self-styled Pied Piper has completed a tour of 33 Arctic settlements in an effort to bridge the gap between natives and whites in the Northwest Territories.

David Brough, 24, arrived in Yellowknife last summer with 20 cents in his pocket. He worked as an entertainer in bars and cocktail lounges to fortify his pocketbook and then set out on a tour of Canada's Arctic regions where people are more famil-iar with fox traps and rifles than with trumpets, harmoni-cas, flutes, concertinas, kaguitars and autoharps.

Mr. Brough plays them all. He started with Christmas carols on a tuba when he was 13 and kept going until he mastered 25 instruments.

Last summer he gave ap a CBC television show to embark on his northern junket which covered nearly 20,000 miles from Baffin Island in the east to Holman and Cop-

My Lai Incident Publicity Ban To Be Enforced

By GEORGE C. WILSON

COLUMBUS, Ga. (WP) - The military judge presiding over the murder trial of Lt. William L. Calley, Jr., has asked the United States attorneygeneral to move against persons and publications whose public statements jeopardize Calley's constitutional rights.

Lt. Col. Reid W. Kennedy said that his military court here at Ft. Benning has done everything in its power to stem prejudicial publicity and was appealing to the justice department because it has clearer authority to act in that area.

Kennedy said the right of due process of law guaranteed by the constitution must take precedence over the right of public expression when the two are in conflict as in the Calley case. He said he had warned the news media to be "as discrete news media to be "as discrete as possible" and had ordered prospective witnesses not to give testimony outside the courtroom about the alleged My Lai massacre.

The judge then cited three instances of recent publicity which appeared to him to violate his instructions.

Kennedy directed army Capt. Aubrey M. Daniel III. prosecution counsel, to refer the exhibits to the U.S. justice department for "investigation and possible prosecution." A few minutes later in the open hearing he added to those exhibits other examples of publicity about My Lai supplied by Calley's defence lawyer.

The transcript of President Nixon's news conference last week was among the exhibits submitted. Nixon at that time expressed abhorrence about the alleged My Lai massacre and said anyone found guilty would be punished.

Calley's Defence Prejudice

Tuesday's session—the second so far-dramatically showed that Calley's first line of defence is the contention that he cannot possibly obtain due process of law because of all the pre-trial publicity.

George W. Latimer, Calley's civilian counsel, and army Major Kenneth A. Raby, military counsel, are scheduled to argue for dismissal of the case on those grounds Jan. 20.

The defence lawyers also laid down a second line of defence Tuesday, arguing for dismissal on the ground that the military does not have jurisdiction to court matrial

The motion asserts that Cally's first term in military service expired before the murder charges against him were "referred to trial" and he therefore deserves a vilian jury trial.

Calley was charged Sept. 5, according to army spokesmen here, and his term expired Sept. 6. But the full charges of killing 109 persons in My Lai on March 16, 1968, did not come until after Sept. 6.

The defence motion con-tends that Calley had "not placed in jeopardy" before Sept. 6 to the point that any court-martial had jurisdiction over him. Calley was kept in service beyond his regular expiration date, pending the outcome of the case. The motion argues that this retention amounted to "in-voluntary servitude" and violation of Calley's constitutional rights. Besides being charged with killing 109 persons at My Lai, Calley is being investigated for an earlier killing in Vietnam. Latimer, talking about this additional investi gation; told the court with tone of dismay Tuesday: 'You can only hang a man

Defendant Maintains Composure

The 26-year-old Calley sat impassively between his mili-tary and civilian lawyers through the legal skirminshing on the third floor of the centre troop command headquarters here. He smiled only once the time his lawyer asked the judge if it was all right to smoke in the courtoom. Calley had been puffing away unconcernedly, and the judge ruled smoking was allowed.

The military judge—a 49-year-old native of Cleveland who studied law at Drake University before starting his 19 years of army servicetalked calmly and slowly. And when both the prosecution and defence lawyers objected to letting army Capt. Edwin Richards, counsel for army Capt. Ernest Medina address the court, Kennedy decided to hear him anyway.

Richards argued that Medina-commander of Company C at My Lai-should not be banned from telling his side of the story to the public because he is only speaking "in self-defence" as distinguished from giving testimony about others.

The judge disagreed. He said there is no way to know the impact of Medina's statements, adding that the court was "remiss" in failing to order Medina's silence. "It never occurred to me that Capt. Medina would grant an interview," Kennedy said.

The judge told Richards: "I don't believe there should be public utterance. He (Medina) is not to make any public disclosures.'

The examples the judge picked out for Attorney-General John N. Mitchell to study were the following:

• An NBC interview on the "Today" television show with Ronald Haeberle, the former army photographer who sold his pictures of the alleged My Lai massacre to

 An offer PFC. Anthony Broussard of Ft. Polk, La., reported to the court from Time and Life. A reporter from Time, Kennedy said offered Broussard 7,000 dollars or a Corvette automobile for an interview about what he saw at My Lai.

 A Houston Chronicle newspaper interview with Herbert Carter, an army trooper believed to have shot himself in the foot at My Lai on the day of the alleged massacre. The judge noted that the Associated Press distributed the Dec. 10 story widely.

Judge Kennedy added to those examples for the attorney-general these exhibits supplied by Calley's lawyers Dec. 8 and 15 issues of Newsweek, Dec. 5 issues of Life, Dec. 15 Issue of Time, Dec. 10 edition of the Columbus. Ga., Ledger.

And the point is that Hockey Canada is saying simply that it intends to abide by the tournament rules as they now exist, and any changes concerning the use of professionals by the International Ice Hockey Federation will be seriously frowned upon,

The statement is two-fold. First it is an answer to Bunny Ahearne, president of the IIHF, who has warned that Canada's use of professionals is under question; and secondly, because it raises another point: the status of professionals who have come to the NHL on an emergency basis this year.

In regard to Ahearne's complaints against Canada's possible use of professionals, or ex-pros, Hockey Canada managing director Buck Houle said this week:

Soviets Say They Want the Best But Don't Want to Offend Avery

WINNIPEG (CP) - If Canada persists in using nine professionals in the world hockey tournament next year against an International Olympic Committee decree the Russians will stay at home, a Soviet official said Wednesday night.

George Losolov, president of the Russian Ice Hockey Federation, was commenting at a news conference on statements by IOC president Avery Brundage that any amateur team who plays against professionals may lose Olympic eligibility.
"If Mr. Brundage is against the use of Canada will absolutely abide by rules set down at the International Ice Hockey Federation's meeting in Switzerland. Those rules allow Canada to use nine professionals in its 1970 world tournament lineup.

"If Canada can't have nine pros, then the other five teams can go play with themselves," Houle said.

"The Soviets and Canada need each other because the Soviets want to play the best And to get the best we must go to the professionals and get what you might call 'some Soviet amateurs' to strengthen our

By Ernie Fedoruk

(Second of two parts on Victoria Golf Club history.)

At the outset, Harvey Coombe was Victoria's and the Pacific Northwest's most dominant golfer. The late A. V. Macan, who gained greatest fame as a course architect, and, more recently, Dr. George Bigelow, rank as Victoria's most notable performers in Oak Bay's continuing inter-club series with Seattle Golf Club. Stan Haynes is the "senior statesman" of Victoria's team, having played regularly since 1924. Seattle has had the edge in "name" players.

Former PNGA champions Harry Givan and Erv Parent are the mainstays of recent Seattle teams.

Bon Stein, an early Western Amateur champion; Lee Steil, Jack Ballinger, H.A. (Dixie) Flaeger, Forrest Watson, R. D. Lapham and Claire Griswold were others who packed a potent punch for Seattle over the years.

Bigelow, 1967 Canadian seniors' champion and runner-up in the 1969 world seniors' tournament at St. Andrew's, scored his 14th career ace in the warmup round before the 1968 inter-club match in Victoria

'All my members wanted to know why I didn't save the hole-in-one until the next day. Frankly, I wasn't sure I could . with all the Seattle players on hand as well as my own members," he said.

Victoria members triumphed during the past two years, but Seattle maintains a great edge in the over-all series. Seattle has won 39 matches and lost 19. Two ended in ties, and play was suspended seven years during the First and Second World It is a series spiced with humor, goodwill, second-guessing

(at draw time) and longevity records. The most remarkable lonevity mark is the one compiled by Seattle banker Joshua Green, who celebrated his 100th birthday on Oct. 16, 1969. The venerable golfer played in the original match, and almost every one since, until a few years ago. Green missed becoming a charter member of the Seattle club by a few months. It was chartered in August of 1900, and he joined in October. But he still plays. On Nov. 1—the occasion of Seattle's annual general meeting—the 100-year-old golfer played nine holes before sitting down to supper. (At that, Joshua concedes the Pacific Northwest's "oldest golfer" honor to Arthur Thompson of Uplands, who celebrated his 100th birthday June 30, 1969.) Longevity also prevails among the pros who play in the series. Seattle has known only two pros—Bob Johnstone (1905 to 1937) and the still-active Bill Zongker. Phil Taylor was Victoria's "Mr. Golf" for 34 colorful years, from 1925 until his retirement in 1959.

The earliest golf equipment had to be imported from Scotland, and its arrival created considerable consternation at the customs office. Customs officers hadn't heard of the game and hesitated in submitting clearance.

An understanding inspector finally came to the rescue The golf equipment was classified as "garden implements" and promptly released, duty-free, to the relieved golfers.

* * * *
Customs men consistently have exhibited "understanding" towards the golfers. It was evident during prohibition and Second World War eras.

At that time, too, the American players displayed extraordinary enthusiasm towards the matches. Seattle turned out en masse to welcome the Canadians' arrival at the ferry

"Those receptions were something," recalled Reg Wilde, a former president of the Victoria club. "I strongly suspect they knew we had real Scotch Whisky in our bags."

Golf bags of the prohibition era, remembers Taylor, still a daily visitor at his club, "were the heaviest ones I've ever seen before and since . "Once in a while," added Taylor, "we had to fear an ambitious young customs man who was all-fired to do his duty. Thank the Lord there were plenty of doctors on our team." (Medics were permitted to carry a limited amount of "spirits" for prescription purposes.)

We always had enough prescriptions to carry us over for Veteran Oak Bay players also regale in telling the story about Col. J. Peters, Victoria's president in 1915. He invariably displayed more competitive spirit than good golf.

During one close match, Peters' ball trickled into a sand trap. He dreaded traps, but stepped in He swung. Sand sprayed but the ball remained in the trap.

Peters dropped his club, fell to his knees, clasped his hands in prayer and looked to the skies.
"Dear Lord," he exclaimed, "the Victoria team needs Your

'NOT APPROPRIATE TO MODERN NAVY'

British Admiralty Ends Issue of Rum

By MARTIN WOLLACOTT The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — The signal went out to the British Fleet Wednesday: No more rum, no more grog, no more queuing up for your tot at the welcome piping of "Up Spirits."

After 400 years, Britain's navy has decided to abolish the rum issue — because, in the words of First Sea Lord Admiral Sir Michael Le Fanu, it is "not appropriate to a modern instant response navy."

As one officer said after a press conference at the Ministry of Defence, "Having been the captain of a ship I know what trouble it can cause,"... now we can get a full afternoon's work from every man, which we haven't been able to do for a very long time."

The daily rum issue is equal to slightly more than a stiff double of ordinary spirit. Senior noncommissioned officers get it issued straight, other sailors diluted in the form of "grog." Some 35,000 sailors are entitled to the rum issue and in 1968 29,000 drew it, the others taking instead three pennies a day. About 150,000 gallons of issue strength run — 95.5 proof — goes to the navy annually at a cost, in 1968-69, of $204,000.

In compensation for the end of the tot, a solid 6.5 million dollars is to be put into a new sailor's fund for the benefit of sailors and marines.

Britain is not going to have a dry navy, like the Americans.

Sir Michael said that he had spent a year serving with the U.S. Navy and that Americans were rather different people than Britons.

"It's a good idea for their navy to be dry," he said, "I don't think it's a good idea for us."

So officers will continue to drink. And chief petty officers, petty officers and senior marine non-commissioned officers will now be allowed to buy daily a small quantity — an eighth of a pint — of commercial spirits. Other sailors will have their daily beer ration upped from two to three cans.

And "Splice the Mainbrace," the order for a special issue of rum to officers and men, is not being abolished. But the issue will be of ordinary whisky or gin, and there has to be a "pretty good reason for it."

Black Panther Shooting ... Massacre or Mere Routine?

By WILLIAM CHAPPMAN and JOSEPH D. WHITAKER

CHICAGO (WP) - At 4:45 a.m. on the chilly morning of Dec. 4, 14 Chicago policemen armed with a submachine gun, three shotguns and sidearms, burst into a seedy apartment in the West Side

Inside were nine black men and women, including the charismatic leader of the Illinois Black Panther Party, Fred Hampton, and a Panther leader from Peoria, Mark Clark

Many bursts of gunfire shattered through the room. When it was over, Hampton and Clark were dead, four of their friends and one policeman were wounded.

Those were the stark facts-and they are still the only ones which all Chicago is agreed upon. All the rest, for the past 11 days, has been the subject of intensifying disagreement.

'Murder.' said the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, a moderate civil rights leader. 'search and destroy mission" organized to eliminate their party's leadership, said the Panthers.

It was a "shoot-out" spawned by a legal, routine raid to seize illegal weapons by officers who never knew until afterward that Hampton and Clark were in the rooms. insisted Cook County's States Attorney Edward V. Han-

After examinations of the apartment and interviews with many sources on both sides, it appears:

• That the police account their entry and of being fired on first is subject to serious doubts.

• That virtually all of the shots came from weapons fired into the Panthers' quarters from directions where police had entered. Most of it was directed toward Hampton's bedroom.

 That no evidence is available to show that Hampton and Clark were the deliberately chosen targets of the raid

The following is what police said happened:

Hanrahan's office, which includes about 100 assigned Chicago policemen, had received reports from two informants that illegal weapons were present in the apartment West Monroe Street. block from Black Panther headquarters.

A warrant was obtained to search the premises. Sgt. Daniel Groth and two detectives decided that an early morning raid aas necessary, both to avoid injury to bystanders in the residential block and to minimize danger to themselves.

Groth and four men approached the first of two ment. (The first door faces, the street and opens into a small anteroom. On the imdoor, leading directly into the apartment living room) roth knocked twice on door, heard a voice say, 'Who's there?'' and answered that they were police with a search warrant. When he be opened, a voice replied, "Just a minute.

Without waiting further, Groth ordered the door kicked open and the officers moved into the antercom. A shotgun blast came through the inner door from inside the apartment.

The officers burst inside and began firing-at a woman holding a shotgun in the living another shotgun.

Simultaneously, four other officers burst in the rear Then followed what police first reported as a 20minute exchange of gunfire. Shotgun blasts and pistol fire reportedly came from two bedrooms and police in front and back returned fire. Groth called for the occupants to surrender several times. voice from a bedroom said, "Shoot it out."

When the shooting ended, Clark was slumped dead behind the front door, through which police had entered and Hampton was lying face-down on his bed, dead of bulle wounds in his head. Police confiscated nine shotguns, seven pistols, two carbines and several hundred rounds of ammunition.

The police account is subject to question on two major points:

• First, the direction of the first blast through the inner front door.

Police said it was a shotgun blast from inside, although a single hole was left in the wooden panel. Police claim the single hole was caused by a deer slug fired from a shotgun within

However had it been fired from inside, and missed the officers outside, the slug seemingly would have smashed against a wall directly across the antercom behind them. There are no marks on that wall to indicate a slug struck it.

Reporters, black policemen and defence lawyers who examined the door maintained that splintering marks indi-cate that the shot came from outside and was fired from the anteroom where police

The second point concerns the firing inside the apartment

Police contend there was a general exchange of gunfire with officers firing into the bedrooms and with the occupants firing out. There are dozens of bullet holes on the walls of the bedrooms. Reporters could find no definite bullet holes or chip marks on the walls opposite those bedrooms or around the front and doors through which police entered. There is one hole in the edge of the outer front door, seemingly caused by a bullet fired from inside.

There are about 40 bullet holes in the wall separating the living room from the front bedroom. All indications are that they were caused by fire from a submachine gun from the front of the apartment.

other holes apparently from a gun fired om the same direction, are in the wall directly above the bed where Hampton was found dead. There are more holes high up on the rear wall of Hampton's bedroom.

the police were fired upon, Hanrahan's office took the extraordinary step of releasing police photographs of the newspaper, The Chicago Tribune. The photographs dis-played three different scenes, purporting to show holes caused by bullets fired by people in the apartment. The first was of the front door slug hole, the origin of which is very much in dis-

The other two turned out not to be what the Tribune's police pictures described. Re porters-first from the Chicago Sun Times and then from other newspapers-discovered the pictures were mislabeled and did not, in fact, represent firing by persons inside the apartment.

One picture was of the rear door through which the second contingent of police had entered. In the police photos, two- "bullet holes" were circled in the door facing. The caption said that Nanrahan released pictures to Tribune showing that bullets were fired from inside secret headquarters of Black Panthers.

The "bullet holes," however, turned out to be the rusted heads of nails in the door facing. When questioned by the press, Hanrahan said the Tribune's employees, not his office, had circled the spots on the pictures and had written the caption. "We are not editors," he said.

The Tribune responded by its personnel had saying circled the spots as bullet holes using information supplied by Hanrahan's office.

The second photograph was of another door inside the apartment that had been blasted by gunfire.

The Tribune, again quoting policemen, described it as a bathroom door. It was shown to substantiate Sgt. Groth's claim that the blacks had fired blindly out of the front bedroom and into the bathroom door across a small corridor.

Reporters discovered that the bathroom door was not touched by gunfire. Instead, the police photo was of a bedroom door which, when open, swings back against the bullet - riddled wall through which the police submachine

Panther party members and residents of the West Side neighborhood seem firmly convinced by evidence inside the apartment that there was no shootout as was reported by police.

In a press conference, top Panther Leader Bobby Rush gave newsmen the party's version of how the incident happened.

According to Rush, around 4 a.m. the day of the shooting, residents of West Monroe Street saw police officers canvassing the street and a Bell Telephone panel truck. Just moments before the shooting, he said, officers from the truck were seen taking positions on top of across the street from the Hampton apartment.

He said shortly after 4 a.m. more officers arrived and positioned themselves at the apartment's front and rear doors. Rush said an officer at the front door knocked.

The policemen came through the inside door shooting, Rush said, and Mark Clark was fatally wounded as he attempted to dodge police submachinegun gunfire.

Rush said that Brenda Harris, who was on a bed diagonally across from the entered, was also wounded in the thigh by machinegun bullets. A wall behind the bed was perforated with holes made by police gunfire.

Rush said policemen at the rear pushed through the kitchen door and into the dining room area firing their intiial

"I'm the only fellow who wears it the year round-but then, that's my job," said Maj. Calum Iain Nicholson MacLeod, head of the department of Celtin studies at St. Francis Xavier University.

Maj. MacLeod, ruddy of face and sturdy of build, uses the direct speech of his Scottish homeland, laced with a dram of humor from time to time-like as not at the expense of the Sassenach.

Kilted or kilt-less, the Scottish culture is enjoying a revival in Nova Scotia-thanks in some measure to French-Canationalism, opinion of Maj. MacLeod.

ACTED AS SPUR

Asked whether aggressive Quebec nationalism is seen as a threat by Scottish groups, the 55-year-old soldier-scholar replied:

"I don't think so. I think it has acted as a spur. A new Gaelic society was formed in Sydney a few months ago, for instance, a group of young for isolation space is so great an unfinished wing of Ladysmith Hospital had to be pressed into service to isolate five children with c hiekenpox, administrator Ian Peddie sald today.

The children, admitted for upper respiratory problems which later turned out to be the communicable disease. are all from one family.

Persons suffering from chickenpox normally are not admitted to hospital, Peddie said, "but the disease did not reveal itself until three days-after they were in."

Peddie said emergency use of the unfinished ward, which features concrete slab floor with no tile and bare studding on the walls, is indicative of the critical shorage of room.

"An application for funds finish the wing was submitted to the B.C. Hospital Service in June and after lengthy correspondence a representative came to see us.

CHANGING IMAGE OF SPCA

This Man's No Dog-Catcher

DUNCAN - When inspector Dan Hughes asks school children to describe the duties of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, they invariably answer: "They catch dogs.'

It's an image that Hughes has been trying to change, in the Cowichan Valley at least, since he took over the large territory three months ago.

He lectures to children and adult groups, gives daily information on animal care and on which animals are available for adoption on local radio and encourages residents to call him about animal neglect or complaints "Calls made to city hall just die there," Hughes said in an

It is a long day's night, especially when you include building expansion and remodelling taking place right now. But diligence is starting to pay off.

Frank Bronee, vice-president of Cowichan branch SPCA, says Hughes has put, the branch back on its feet after it almost went broke

"Public relations have improved 100 per cent." Established in 1954, the branch, like others, is mainly majority of its income from pound - contracts, donations disposal of animals at the

For controlling domestic animals (dogs, cats, horses, cattle, sheep, etc.) the branch annually collects about $5,000 from North Cowichan, $2,000 from the city of Duncan and $1.500 from the village of Lake Cowichan.

Hughes, who was an SPCA inspector for two years in the Fraser Valley before moving here, welcomes the passing of two new bylaws in North Cowichan which become law Jan. 1: one for control and impounding of animals, the other for licensing of dogs.

Among other things, the bylaw decreases the holding time of animals at the Cassino Road pound from eight days to three. Animals collected in Duncan city will still be held for eight days before being disposed of while Lake Cowichan has dropped its holding time from seven to employs only Hughes on a fulltime, paid basis although he is supported by a 20-member volunteer board headed by Mary Walton.

As well as supervising the aforementioned tories. Hughes covers all the unorganized territory inbetween. No payment is make the SPCA for this extra service:

That is one reason why Hughes would like to see the whole area come under jurisdiction of the Cowichan Valley Regional District which could unify fees and regulations.

However, at its last meeting the board was doubtful that an annuaual budget of $24,000 would stand much chance of being passed by referendum. The board instead asked the SPCA to submit a cost figure for operation of a basic SPCA unit without a pound service.

Nevertheless, North Cowichan residents can look forward to increased pound service fees as well enforced dog licences next year. And a state of the animal population in Duncan is being prepared with recommendations for harsher action

Rather than having tougher legislation enacted. Hughes would prefer to see people take better care of their pets and domestic animals.

North America is the philos-ophy that every child should have a dog, cat, bird, horse or whatever. Unfortunately, that cute fluffy dog grows up to become a big, untrained animal.

"Dogs, being social animals, soon run in packs and then it becomes a job for the police or - pardon the expression dog catcher."

With Christmas just around the corner, Hughes spends time with each prospective pet owner outlining the responsibility of owning a pet.

"If they don't, we'll have it back on our hands in a short time in one form or another,' he said. The dogcatcher image will take a while to change if November in Duncan city alone is any example. Ten of the 18 dogs and 13 of the 14 cats picked up were destroyed. On the more cheerful side, 150 dogs were adopted in the last 21/2 months, hopefully by better owners than those who gave them up or abandoned them. The adoptions are largely due to Hughes' imagerestoring public relations

Anyone Here Smell Smoke?

If city firefighters ever get called out to the main Legis-lative Buildings that's probably the first question that workers and tourists will ask them.

The building has no internal fire alarm system.

There is no way of telling people within the building that a fire has broken out except by shouting.

WOULDN'T KNOW

There is an automatic system that would set off an alarm at the city fire depart-ment but the people within the building wouldn't know about it unless they smelled the City fire prevention officers aren't very happy about the situation.

They feel it's dangerous.

They have pointed out to Public Works Minister W. N. Chat that the provincial Fire Marshal's Act calls for buildings of this type to have an internal fire alarm system.

They have pointed it out for two years now but nothing has "Quick evacuation of

Regional Levy 'A Must'

Mayor Urges Standard Assessment

Mayor Hugh Stephen told Capital Regional District Board directors Wednesday to start looking at the possibility of region-wide property assessments.

In his farewell speech to directors, after three years on the board and one year as chairman, Stephen said he was convinced that eventually all property assessments in the region must be standardized.

Each municipality now has its own assessing department with resultant discrepancies from area to area.

Stephen's plea that 1970 directors consider regional assessing as a priority came after directors have tentative approval to draft changes in the district's letters patent.

The changes will bring, after close to 18 months of discussion, the Capital Region Planning Board under regional district jurisdiction

31 the official takeover will become effective Jan. 1.

By April of next year the CRDB will become responsible for the administration of zoning, building and subdivision regulations in all unorganized areas.

In organized areas individual municipalities will still be responsible for their own zoning and building regulations.

Under the new administration a key technical planning committee will be formed comprised of the planning director as chairman, the medical health officer for the area, one employee from each municipality, the provincial director of planning, a representative from the department of highways and representatives from other public agencies if the board eight Pender Harbor fishermen who caught 12 killer whales in their net Friday are playing hard to get.

Bob Wright, president of the Oak Bay Marina, says he's still trying to get one of the whales but is encountering difficulties.

"These boys are pretty tough to deal with. At 4 p.m. yesterday we had one, at 6 and again at 8 p.m. it was nothing, then at 10 p.m. we had a chance on two.

"We want a prime animal. Besides getting a bride for Haida (Sealand's killer whale) it makes sense to have a back up whale.

Wright says that if we can make a deal with the whales' captors — "We're prepared to meet their price" — he would have the new animal at Sealand by Christmas.

The toughening of the fishermen's attitude may be partially due to the bombardment of phone calls they're receiving at their homes.

Dear Readers.

With the holiday season almost here, most of us are spending hours and days trying to find just the right gifts. The most precious gift one can give is her time, this is the real joy of giving.

Set aside a few days for making those gifts for friends and family, you'll not only save money but your gift can I'll tell you about a few-

First, the stadium blanket for all sports enthusiasts, or for car warm-ups. Find some attractive wool; not too scratchy (they are usually on sale at this time of year), and buy about a yard and a half to a yard and three-fourths. The only finish you need is to fringe about 1 inch or more on each end.

For the bedroom, weman wouldn't feel pampered with a soft, lightweight woolen throw. Takes only minutes to make because again you only fringe the ends. For added glamour and individuality, add a block monogram of velvet gibbon to one corner.

For the man or woman who is confined to a wheelchair or bed, a beautiful lightweight wool throw to keep the chill away can do much for the morale and take away the drabness of being ill when you use a cheerful color.

Even baby's security blanket can take on new meaning with a personalized name in washable velvet.

If you live in a part of the country where the evenings are cold, it's great to keep one in the car at all times to throw over your legs until the heater starts to work (sometimes this seems to be an eternity). So you see, almost everyone you know would be happy-with a beautiful piece

Today I received an interoffice memo informing me that all the employees were getting together to "Buy the boss a Buick."

Now, the boss needs somebody to buy him a Buick like I need another head. Furthermore, I think it's a cheap trick to put the arm on all the employees this way.

So what's a guy supposed to ? If Il refuse, it's sure to get back to the boss, and you know what will happen to me. If I go along with it (which is probably the only thing I can do) I will hate myself. Got any advice? — Working

They ordered enough material for everyone and those who couldn't sew were helped by their fellow work-ers. Total cost for each dress was approximately $18 for a size 12, compared to average $30 for a similar department store dress.

Mrs. Campion said the pattern she selected is good for every figure type, regardless of height, weight or age. The length of the new "uniform" dresses now being worn by the girls varies from mini to just above the knee depending on personal choice. The blue of the dresses goes

Christmas Buying Depends on Weather

By THE CANADIAN PRESS They said it last year and the year before that. They're saying it again this year. "The weather. . . "

In this, the last week of the Christmas shopping season, Canada's merchants are keen weather-watchers. They like that nip in the air, a bit of snow-not too much, though on the ground. It gets things

Particularly in Eastern Canada, mild weather was given as one reason for a slower-than-usual start on Christmas shopping this year... money is tight. Prolonged strikes in many areas had an effect upon the economy. A hold-the-line feeling was defi-

But now it's the last week of the annual rush. A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian lowances for the usual pockets of sales resistance such as Saskatchewan, Christmas business probably will be up by six per cent or so over

That is viewed as steady growth, nothing spectacular. And not bad in the light of governmental brakes put on spending this inflation year. Here and there cash is short, but isn't it always?

Christmas trade in 1968 was record $5,000,000,000 or so and businessmen generally, the survey shows, expect that figure at least to be reached and perhaps slightly exceeded this year.

Following is the outlook by

One shopping centre in Halifax reported a 15-per-cent gain over 1968 but Nova Scotia generally was about the same. In fact, "generally good" was the summation for the Maritimes as a whole after a slow start.

QUEBEC

Montreal department stores would give no figures but sales volume was reported as up over last year, despite tight money and considerable unemployment. The construction trade in Quebec has been hard hit by labor disputes.

Pickersgill Linked With Bahamas

TORONTO (CP) - The royal commission report on the 1965 collapse of Atlantic Acceptance Corp. Ltd. says J. W. Pickers-gill, former federal transport minister, visited Grand Bahama Island at the invitation of a firm which was seeking Air Canada flights to the island.

And because of the way money multiplies as it moves from spender to spender, Nixon said: "A billion dollars of federal spending or tax relief can add many times that amount to the escalation of our rising price levels."

Biggest Wage Pact Rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) renewed threat of a U.S.-wide railway shutdown early in 1970 poses a post-holiday hangover for the Nixon administration following union members' rejec-tion of a contract that included the biggest wage proposal in their history

But a change in work rules. not the wage package blamed by the union for the rejection.

"I'n naturally disappointed," Labor Secretary George Shutz said Wednesday. He had directed government efforts to reach the tentative settlement.

"The agreement was shot down by a vote of close to 2 to 1." said Vice-President J. W. O'Brien of the AFL-CIO Sheet Metal Workers, with 8,000 members involved.

Members of three other AFL-CIO shoperaft unions in the dismachinists, electricians and boilermakers narrowly approved the proposal, but the unions had agreed none would-accept unless all did. Thus, about 5,000 Sheet Metal Workers who voted "no" killed the settlement involving a total of 48,000

"They turned down a hell of a and settlement." said John P Hiltz, chief negotiator for the rail industry.

SEEKS MORE MEETINGS

Hiltz said machinists' vicepresident William W. Winpisinger, chief negotiator for the four unios, asked him to return to the bargaining table "some time after Jah. 6."

Hiltz said he assumed from this the unions would not call a strike before then, although they have been free to stage walkout since Dec. 3, when all scderal delaying procedures expired.

The proposed settlement would have raised current wages of $3.60 an hour to $4 by retroactive for all of 1969, and to $4.28 by next Au-

O'Brien said it was not dissatisfaction with wages, but a pro-posed change in work rules that caused Sheet Metal Workers to reject it. The work rule change would have nermitted members of all four unions to cross each other's jurisdictional lines for a limited amount of work

Hiltz said the railways expected the change to save them money through increased effideaths in nine years of the Vietnam war will total more than 40,000 by Jan. 1 if the current rate continues.

The U.S. command announced today that 85 Americans were killed in action last week, 15 less than the previous week. This raised the number of U.S. battlefield dead since Jan 1, 1961 to 39,827.

For the last six weeks, the total of U.S. combat dead has averaged about 100, and there is no expectation that this will decrease substantially any time soon.

The U.S. also reported 836 Americans wounded in action last week, a sizeable increase over the 592 wounded the week before. A total of 261,256 Americans have been wounded in the war.

South Vietnamese headquarters said 421 government troops were killed in action last week, 10 more than the week before, and 1,436 government troops were wounded.

A spokesman said South Vietnamese casualties since Jan. 1, 1960, totals 97,541 killed and 216,128 wounded.

commands claimed 2,396 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed last week, a slight drop from the previous week's revised toll of 2,450.

The U.S. casualty summary said southern allied forces now have killed at least 582,378 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops since Jan. 1, 1961.

These summaries add up to a total of 1,197,130 troops killed or wounded on both sides of the war since Jan. 1, 1960.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

MOVIE TO WATCH tonight is at 11:40 on Channel 2. It's English comic Norman Wisdom at his best, as a milkman embroiled in a dairy dispute in The Early Bird.

FAMILY AFFAIR. 7, Channel 8; 7:30, Channel 7. Once a season French is involved in a romance in which a cultured lady makes a vocal pass. Ida Lupino does the job here as a rich English widow, an old love; who offers French the role of her husband and chairman of the board. Such a gesture can't be ignored, and French gives it some thought, but viewers know what the final answer will be. He would turn down the prime ministership for his dear family.

SPECIAL, 7:30, Channel 5. "The Little Drummer Boy" (repeat). Youngsters will enjoy this holiday special based on the extremely popular song of the title. It uses animated dolls to tell the story of the drummer boy who hates all human beings until he arrives in Bethlehem and learns what love is when he sees the Christ Child. The highlight of the half-hour is the singing of the song by the famed Vienna Choir Boys, as we see the doll representing the drummer play for the newborn child.

DIAMOND LIL'S. 10:30, Channel 8. Guests include singer Jack Northmore and dancer Joey Hollingsworth.

SPECIAL 8. Channel 5. "Together Again for the First Time." Our two admiring stars, Carol Burnett and Bing Crosby, hitch up for a second round, in a holiday offering that's a first, aided by Roy Clark and Juliet Prowse. Carol plays her charwoman character in a Los Angeles department store, being cheered up by janitor Bing, trotting out puppets, waltzing down the aisle, crooning "Tiptoe Through the Tulips," and enjoying himself. Crosby also plays Santa Claus to Carol as a little girl, and strums a ukelele accompanying Roy Clark. The cast tampers with "Jingle Bells," as if written by people like Meredith Willson or Jerry Herman, and gives plenty of time to song hits of the '60s, ranging from 'Moon River' to "Aquarius," before we hear White Christmas."

BOB HOPE SPECIAL. 8, Channels 2, 6; 9, Channel 5. Just before his round-the-world Christmas tour of military bases, Hope fires away with Anthony Newley, Elke Sommer and Andy Williams. With Newley as a rival, Hope does a broad takeoff on "Midnight Cowboy," attempting to pick up girls in London, and both characters strike out. Elke Sommer plays Mrs. Santa Claus using all her wiles to keep Santa (Hope) at home on Christmas and she joins psychiatrist Andy Williams in an effort to break her guest star contract with the host. The All-America college football team is also on display.

THIS IS TOM JONES 7:30 Channel 8: 9 Channel 4 Our Welsh host boasts a fine guest list tonight as Liza Minelli, Frankie Vaughan and comedian Pat Cooper join him on the show Highlights include Liza's solos to "God Bless This Child," others; "Don't Ever Walk Alone" from Tom Jones; Frankie Vaughan's "Hide Away," and a medley of Al Jolson's songs from Liza, Frankie and Tom

DEAN MARTIN, 8:30, Channel 8. Following two NBC becials, Dino dangles such bait as Gina Lollobrigida, Orson elles and George Gobel to keep the viewers happy. Miss Welles and George Gobel to keep the viewers happy. Miss Lollobrigida doesn't over do it singing "Give Him the Ooh-La-La": Welles returns for a reading of "Richard II." and a duet with his host; Gobel offers his version of how kilts came about and Charles Nelson Reilly, caterer, gives Martin suggestions on ways to hold an office party before the Golddiggers trot on to back up the boss for a good closing medley

ATTRACTIVE ITALIAN star Gina Lollobrigida is special guest star tonight on the Dean Martin Show. She teams with Dean for comedy and music. (See listing opposite.)

JIM NABORS. 8, Channel 7; 9:30, Channel 12. Likeable Bill Dana is Jim's special guest tonight. As Jose Jimenez, he plays a baby doctor, joins Nabors for a song about language problems, and has time to speak Russian. Japanese and a few other accents just for fun. Jim's numbers include "Ave Maria," along with a big production finale on "rain" songs, and he drives Frank Sutton crazy in the weekly brother-in-law skit.

Taking Care of Potted Mums

As a year round gift plant, the potted chrysanthemum has appeared in 75 per cent of homes in Victoria area. This is of course just guessing, based on the number of enquiries received all through the seasons as to what to do with the plants when flowers fade.

With hundreds more of these fine little plants already in homes as Christmas gifts, a few facts about them may help.

First to remember is that chrysanthemums are hardy plants outdoors here, normally flowering in our gardens during the period from late August through to November, according to the kind and matter of timing, controlled uninterruped darkness, and

Once the plants arrive in the home, we must not forget chrysanthemums like a cool temperature, a rather dry atmosphere, and no wet feet.

The pots can be stood at night in a room where it may be 60 deg. F. or a little lower, but not put outdoors as one enquirer said he was doing. He wondered why leaves were curling and flowers browning before they fully opened.

When the flowers fade, that is the end for this season.

There will not be a succession of buds.

If you have a garden, you can grow the plant there later. If no garden, discard the plant for it will not flower well again in the pot.

Should the weather still be not freezing at night, the plant can be taken out of the pot and planted outdoors. Cut the stems down to a couple of inches first and set the pot aside for a week or so in a cool place to prepare it for the change.

Most of the varieties of chrysanthemums grown as pot plants will flower outdoors, much taller in height and only

Short cuttings taken from the base of the plants about late March, rooted in sand and peat, will make better flowering plants for the garden.

POLLUTION FIGHT

MP Hopes To Mobilize The Nation

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA-This is a story about one MP and his batle against water pollution.

It is also the story of a backbencher who says he is having fun being an MP and who thinksunlike many of his colleagues who complain about being powerless and ineffective—that he can use his office and energy to generate socially useful activity.

The MP is David Anderson, 32-year-old former foreign service officer who was elected last year as Liberal member for Esquimalt-Saanich and who was described recently as one of Ottawa's most eligible

Anderson first became involved in the problem of water pollution when his mother bought a washing machine which uses a detergent imported from the United States.

Major Canadian manufacturers of washing compounds. subscribe to a voluntary code requiring detergents to be biodegradable that is, that their foaming action will end after about 48 hours and will not continue to clog water-

But there was nothing on the U.S. import to guarantee that it met this standard, and are apparently some foreign products entering Canada, and some domestic manufacturers, that are not subject to the code.

So last July Anderson introduced a private member's bill providing stiff fines for any-

Cale wrote a slightly pat-ronizing letter to Anderson pointing out that Canadian manufacturers had converted to biodegradable detergents in 1966, and suggesting that the MP really did not know what he was talking about.

Anderson wrote back say-ing, yes, he did know about Canadian standards, and his bill was specifically aimed at products not meeting the standards.

Meantime, said Anderson in his letter dated Oct. 8, maybe the Environmental Quality Control Committee etc. could another, more serious

This report was prepared after years of study by U.S. and Canadian experts for the International Joint Com-

It says in summary that the lakes are being killed by the rapid growth of algae fed by fertilizing nutrients. The controlling nutrient in most cases is phospherous, and the only possible solution to this problem is to control and reduce the drain of phosphates into the lakes. 'At the present time it is estimated that 50 per cent to 70 per cent of the total input of phosphorous from all municipal and industrial wastes into the lower great lakes comes from detergents partial replacement of phos-phates in detergents is now

The detergent industry has published contradicting evidence and has argued that there is as yet no substitute for phosphates, it claims that eliminating phosphates from detergents in Canada would not have much impact on pollution.

Anderson is not so far seriously campaigning to ban phosphates. He is saying that manufacturers should print on boxes of detergents the percentage of phosphates.

This would enable housewives to choose a low-phosphate product, if they wished, and thus to play her part in battling pollution.

The industry's lobby has not replied to Anderson's request for information. When the Consumers' Association of Canada asked for publication of the facts, Mrs. Myrtle Corcoran of the home service bureau of Lever Brothers Ltd., replied:

"Content would have no measurable effect because there is not enough difference among detergents to affect the total phosphate level in treated sewage." This assurance seems to be at odds with an earlier letter to the association from Cale, the environmental quality con-trol spokesman, in which he said that phosphate builder composes from 30 to 60 per cent of packaged detergents. However that may be, the industry obviously was not telling the MP or the consumers just what went into its boxes. So Anderson tried the. federal government's department of Energy, Mines and

Commission Urges French As Quebec's Work Tongue

OTTAWA (CP) should become the main working language "at all levels" in private business and industry in Quebec, nine of the 10 royal commissioners on bilingualism and biculturalism said

the Toronto Humane Society's

Commissioner Frank Scott, retired dean of law at McGill University, said this recommendation, while well-inten-tioned, is impractical and possibly harmful to the Que bec economy latest report, a 240,000-word discussion of the "work world" in Canada was tabled by Prime Minister Trudeau. I is the third of several reports planned by the commission ed by co-chairmen Davidson Dunton, president of Carleton University, and Jean-Louis Gagnon, Montreal journalist.

Many of its 57 recommendations are aimed at the business community and the commission appeals for co-opera tion from the private sector of the economy in working out programs that will give French-speaking Canadians career opportunities in their own language

WOULD BE DOMINANT

The only recommendation not unanimous urges that major firms in Quebec design nate all management and senier positions as posts that require bilingual executives.

Dean Scott said the recom-mendation, "though aiming at the proper objective of in-creasing the use of French as a language of business in Quebec, will strengthen the hands of those and their numbers are increasing-who think there can be a uni-lingual Quebec in a bilingual Canada, or an independent Quebec that will not recognize

"How can a firm with a head office in Montreal, one production unit in Quebec with French - speaking employees, and 10 factories in other parts of Canada, make the top-level executives and plan-ning groups use French predomi-nantly?

"Their operations may be 80 per cent outside Quebec. The head office could easily move to another province."

BILINGUAL ARMY RECOMMENDED

OTTAWA (CP) The overwhelmingly English orientation of the Canadian armed forces should be radically transformed, says the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism,

To this end, recommends a report made public Wednesday, a large formation should be created where French would be the military language of including operational, technical and communications language.

One major recommendation is that the National Defence Act be amended to give official recognition to the equality of French and English. Another is that all military orders be issued simultaneously in English and French after joint drafting. "The practice of originating almost all documents in English and subsequently translating them into French should cease at once," the commission says.

Davis Defends Drilling Veto

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said in Ottawa Wednesday he will continue to have a veto on Gulf of Georgia oil drilling even if British Columbia is given mineral rights there.

He was replying to claim by B.C. Mines Minister Frank Richter that B.C. will have the final say on drilling.

Richter said Wednesday that Ottawa has already offered the province mineral rights in the Gulf as part of political settlement being sought on the offshore rights. questien.

B.C. rejected the offer which was made a year ago and continued its claims to mineral rights on the entire continental shelf.

DWARFS BENEFITS

Davis reaffirmed his view that the dangers to fisheries and tourism represented by and gas drilling would dwarf any economic benefits received from discovery of oil in the Gulf.

Meanwhile Richter indicated today that his view of the possibility of allowing drilling has not been changed by disclosure of new oil leaks near Santa Barbara, Calif. of an earlier oil leak

REPORT URGES SMOKE AD BAN

OTTAWA (CP) - Progressive elimination of all cigarette advertising and sales promotion was recommended to the government today by the Commons health committee.

It coupled this and other recommendations with the statement that avoiding smoking is the most effective way to prevent most cases of lung cancer, chronic bronchitis and emphysema and probably is the most practical step to reduce the risk of heart

The committee's report, bound in smoke-grey covers that picture a burning cigarette in an ashtray, was tabled in the Commons by Dr. Gaston Isabell (L.Hull) who headed the two year inquiry into smoking and health.

Mayor Urges Standard Assessment

Regional Levy 'A Must'

Mayor Hugh Stephen told Capital Regional District Board directors Wednesday to start looking at the possibility of region-wide property assessments.

In his farewell speech to directors, after three years on the board and one year as chairman, Stephen said he was convinced that eventually all property assessments in the region must be standardized.

Each municipality now has its own assessing department with resultant discrepancies from area to area.

Stephen's plea that 1970 directors consider regional assessing as a priority came after directors have tentative approval to draft changes in the district's letters patent.

The changes will bring, after close to 18 months of discussion, the Capital Region Planning Board under regional district invincing

In organized areas individual municipalities will still be responsible for their own zoning and building regulations.

THERE ARE MEN, though not many of them, who can whet a carving knife to a fine edge and go to work on a turkey with grace and surgical precision.

There are others, and I am one of them, whose table-grapples with a nicely browned fowl provide comic entertainment for their families.

But for me, the picture has changed. I haven't mauled a bird or skidded a roast for over a year.

Half my key to success consists of a large oval board with several short spikes projecting from its central turkey-board, it's called, and once placed on it, the turk stays firmly in place.

The other half is an electric knife. I would have no truck with this powered aid to carving until last Christmas, when one of these clumsylooking rigs turned up under the tree.

When dinnertime came, I plugged it in, and gingerly set to work.

told it should provide for the creation and development, in all federal departments, crown corporations and other agencies, of organizational units in which French will be the language of work. "These units would be established in a variety of locations and would be of different sizes and functions.'

ENSURE BALANCE

The commission recommends appointments to upperechelon posts in the federal public service, crown corpora-tions and other federal agencies be made in a manner that will ensure "effectively balanced participation" of English-speaking and French-speaking people at these levels.

In the controversial recommendation on the use of French in the private sector in Quebec, the royal commission says the majority of smaller or specialized firms should also use French as a working language."

It also says, however, that there should be a place in Quebec for smaller or specialized firms "where the language of work is English, as there should be a place anywhere in Canada for such firms where the language of work is French."

Dean Scott said the human right to do business in any language "is all too grudg-ingly admitted."

"Freedom of commerce, even in an economy increas-ingly in need of planning, still has an important role to fulfil and, combined with freedom of speech, means the right to do business anywhere in Canada in any language, be it Chinese in Vancouver, Ukrainian in Winnipeg, or Italian in

Anderson rationalizes that the minister, Joe Greene, is pre-occupied with his contro-Canada Water Act, under which all sources of pollution could be controlled, and probably does not want to get mixed up in the sidelines in a battle about detergents. So the MP went ahead himself a couple of weeks ago to introduce a private bill providing that detergents must contain less than 2 per cent of phosphate compounds

Bill Intended as Eye-Catcher

Again, it has no chance of passing into law - few private member's bills are even debated - and was intended more or less as an eye-catcher to lure the industry into a debate.

Anderson was, in fact, scheduled to confront one of the industry leaders on TV last week as a result of the but the leader had to cancel at the last moment.

Meantime, Anderson went home to Victoria recently and called a meeting of the local groups concerned with pollution and consumer rights.

With their encouragement he has now written to 150 organizations in the city youth groups, service clubs, women's patriotic societies, schools, businessmen, - inviting them to a meeting on Jan. 7 to discuss the problem of phosphates.
"Who knows which detergents are low in phosphates?" he asks in the letter.

"Have you ever seen a box which stated the phosphate content of the product? Yet information is essential for consumers who feel a responsibility toward our environment and who wish to make an intelligent choice among the products on the shelves of shops.

"A group of Victorians believe that the demands of a concerned public can bring about the disclosure of the information by manufacturers.' Anderson - hopes that the

Jan. 7 meeting will produce perhaps 1,000 volunteers to picket supermarkets, wear armbands or somehow get the message to manufacturers that consumers want to know what is in the detergent

He has an even more dramatic idea in the back of his mind for the time when it may be necessary to bring public pressure on an oil company causing pollution: A campaign to persuade Canadians to publicly burn their credit cards.

Anderson, in fact, is experimenting in participatory democracy, seeking to involve the people directly in the solution of public problems, using his backbench seat in the Commons as a base from which to organize activities

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

The weather must be just about the most powerful force on the face of the earth. You can't escape the effects of weather no matter where you go. You can be inside a house closed tight in air-conditioned comfort, or you can be climbing a mountain in the rain. Closed doors and windows do not shut out what the weather can do to your body.

The receiving stations for the news about changes in the weather are not only the local radio stations. Your skin and your nervous system, with the assistance of your eyes and nose, all get the message from nature and instantly trigger the news to the action stations on guard in your body.

The action stations then go to work to maintain the internal system that regulates your body's temperature and production of heat and the amount of fluid it needs. They tell your body how much to sweat and when to cool off. The air conditioning only helps.

POLLUTION FIGHT

MP Hopes To Mobilize The Nation

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA-This is a story about one MP and his battle against water pollution.

It is also the story of a backbencher who says he is having fun being an MP and who thinksunlike many of his colleagues who complain about being powerless and ineffective-that he can use his office and energy to generate socially useful activity.

The MP is David Anderson, 32-year-old former foreign service officer who was elected last year as Liberal member for Esquimalt-Saanich and who was described recently as one of Ottawa's most eligible

No Guarantee on Standards

His current campaign is to one manufacturing, advertiscompel detergent manufacto make , known to consumer's the contents of their boxes. His method is to mobilize public opinion in a peaceful demonstration, something similar to the Vietnam moratoriums in the United

Anderson 'first became involved in the problem of water pollution when his mother bought a washing machine which uses a detergent imported from the United States.

Major Canadian manufacturers of washing compounds subscribe to a voluntary code requiring detergents to be hiodegradable — that is, that their foaming action will end after about 48 hours and will not continue to clog water-

But there was, nothing on the U.S. import to guarantee that it met this standard, and there are apparently some foreign products entering Canada, and some domestic manufacturers, that are not subject to the code.

So last July Anderson introduced a private member's bill providing stiff fines for anying, selling or distributing detergents less than 80 per eent biologically decom-

Private MPs bills have almost no chance of becoming law but they are a way of drawing attention to a problem. Anderson's bill caught the attention of W. R. Cale, chairman of the Environmental Quality-Control Committee of the Canadian Manufacturers of Chemical Specialities Association.

Cale wrote a slightly pat-ronizing letter to Anderson pointing out that Canadian manufacturers had converted to biodegradable detergents in 1966, and suggesting that the MP really did not know what he was talking about.

Anderson wrote back - say yes, he did know about Canadian standards, and his bill was specifically aimed at products not meeting the standards.

Meantime, said Anderson in his letter dated Oct. 8, maybe the Environmental Quality Control Committee etc. could him something about

Lakes Killed by Algae Growth

"I would be grateful for any to give me on efforts being made by your association to reduce or eliminate the effect which, it is claimed, detergents have upon aquatic

"Perhaps your association" has not yet had the time to conduct the research necessary to manufacture detergents which exclude the phosphates present in today's products, but I would be grateful for any information you may have on this

There has been no reply. Convincing testimony on the role of phosphates, however, contained in recently published report on pollution of Lake Erie, Lake Ontario and the international section of the St. Lawrence River. It says in summary that the lakes are being killed by the rapid growth of algae fed by fertilizing nutrients. The controlling nutrient in most cases is phosphorous, and the only lem is to control and reduce the drain of phosphates into the lakes.

At the present time it is estimated that 50 per cent to 70 per cent of the total input cipal and industrial wastes into the lower great lakes comes from detergents phates in detergents is now possible with no reduction in cleansing power treatment facilities cannot be economically provided, other than by reduction of the phosphorous contributed by detergents it is estimated that treatment costs for phosphate removal at sewage treatment plants would be reduced by a half to two-thirds by phosphates from detergents.

He Just Wants Percentages

The detergent industry has published contradicting evidence and has argued that there is as yet no substitute for phosphates it claims that eliminating phosphates from detergents in Canada would have much impact on pollution.

Anderson is not so far seriously campaigning to ban phosphates. He is saying simply that manufacturers should print on boxes of detergents the percentage of phosphates.

This would enable housewives to choose a low-phos-phate product, if they wished, and thus to play her part in battling pollution

The industry's lobby has not replied to Anderson's request for information. When the Consumers' Association of Canada asked for publication of the facts, Mrs. Myrtle Corcoran of the home service

Ltd., replied:

"Content would have no measurable effect because there is not enough difference among detergents to affect the total phosphate level in treated sewage."

This assurance seems to be at odds with an earlier letter the environmental quality consaid that phosphate builder composes from 30 to 60 per cent of packaged detergents However that may be, the industry obviously was not telling the MP or the consumers just what went into its boxes. So Anderson tried the federal government's depart-ment of Energy, Mines and Resources

Yes, said one of the officials, they know how much phophorous there is in each Continued on Page 2

Commission Urges French As Quebec's Work Tongue

should become the main working language "at all levels" in private business and industry n Quebec, nine of the 10 royal commissioners on bilingualsm and biculturalism said Wednesday.

Commissioner Frank Scott etired dean of law at McGill' University, said this recom-mendation, while well-infentioned, is impractical and possibly harmful to the Que-

The royal commission's latest report, a 240,000-word discussion of the "work world" in Canada, was tabled in the Commons Wednesday by Prime Minister Trudeau. It is the third of several reports planned by the commission led by co-chairmen Davidson Dunton, president of Carleton University Gagnon, Montreal journalist.

Many of its 57 recommendations are aimed at the business community and the com-mission appeals for co-operation from the private sector of the economy in working out programs that will give French-speaking Canadians career opportunities in their own language;

WOULD BE DOMINANT

The only recommendation not unanimous urges that major firms in Quebec designate all management and senior positions as posts that require bilingual executives.

Dean Scott said the recommendation, "though aiming at the proper objective of in creasing the use of French as a language of business in Quebec, will strengthen the hands of those and their numbers are increasing who think there can be a uni-lingual Quebec in a bilingual Canada, or an independent Quebec that will not recognize linguistic minority rights."

"It is quite unrealistic, and indeed could be very harmful to the Quebec economy, to uggest that French become he principal language of work all levels in the private sector, without distinguishing the various types of business in which the rule is to apply.

per cent outside Quebec. The head office could easily move to another province.

The commission also recomcountry, head offices of firms Quebec develop appropriate bilingual capacities, including French-language units and bilingual senior executives. The "French-language unit" is the basic proposal. It means the division

sion sees in this is that a French-speaking person would be able to work his way up the ladder speaking his own language, Mr. Dunton told a news conference "Wednesday

Davis Defends Drilling Veto

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said in Ottawa Wednesday he will continue to have a veto on Gulf of Georgia oil drilling even if British Columbia is given mineral rights there.

He was replying to claim by B.C. Mines Minister Frank Richter that B.C. will have the final say on drilling.

Richter said Wednesday that Ottawa has already offered the province mineral rights in the Gulf as part of political settlement being sought on the offshore rights

B.C. rejected the offer which was made a year ago and continued its claims to mineral rights on the entire continental shelf.

DWARFS BENEFITS

Davis reaffirmed his view that the dangers to fisheries and tourism represented by and gas. drilling would dwarf any economic benefits received from discovery of oil in the Gulf.

Meanwhile Richter indicated today that his view of the possibility of allowing drilling has not been changed by disclosure of new oil leaks near Santa Barbara, Calif. scene of an earlier oil leak disaster.

STILL HAVE VETO "The offer of delegation of power to collect royalties does not include delegation of all fishing rights. We still have the veto and I will insist in any future negotiations that we continue to have it." He indicated that the veto would be used on carefully considered economic grounds. "I would not do this out of hand but because the possibile benefits a slight increase in employment and a possible, I repeat, possible, reduction in the price of gasoline in the lower mainland — would be nowhere near the potential dangers of a well going wild in the Strait."

proposals "reasonable." The announcement says: "The agreement covers all of the issues in dispute, including hours of work, pay, term of agreement, vacations, training, shift differentials and designated holidays." Lyon launched an immediate

City Waits On Wharf Plan

OTTAWA (CP)-The government will put up $25,000,000 annually in grants over the next five years for urban renewal, Robert Andras, minister without portfolio responsible for housing, told the Commons today.

The minister's statement marked a limited relaxation of the restraints imposed by him last August when he announced a hold on federal spending for urban renewal.

The new policy will permit federal officials to proceed on negotiations for 12 projects in Newfoundland, New Bruns wick, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. Negotiations began on six other projects last August.

There is no indication in the Andras statement whether the grant increases mean Vic-toria's bid to get federal for its $25 million Wharf Street redevelopment will get approval.

The city is seeking $1.5 million from Ottawa to clear and beautify land adjacent to proposed Reid Centre development on the Inner Andras was in Victoria at the end of November and was taken on a tour of the proposed redevelopment area. He expressed personal enthusiasm for the Victoria project but carefully avoided committing federal money, indicating none would be forth-coming until the policy was
